ABOUT

The Hartford Pussies are a Maryland-based band that have been playing music together since 2006. The Pussies met at the University of South Carolina while working at the college radio station, WUSC-FM Columbia, where Zach and Jordan started a Beat Happening cover band. That band was awesome, but hardly musical; successive iterations yielded Pity Rally, which featured more marketable elements such as rhythm/melody and a relocation to just inside the Capital Beltway. After a good run, the Pity Rally moniker was retired in favor of The Hartford Pussies, inspired by a deep-rooted love for hockey video games.

Since relocating to the D.C. area, the band has recorded a four-song e.p. (released on Mother Stamper Records in 2012), released a cassette with Tricot Records in 2013, released the "Summer Breakdown" e.p. in 2014, and is currently working on a seven inch split with Morgan Spaner (Sugarpuss).

The Hartford Pussies' most recent full-length, "Judy," was released in April 2015.

Described as "Indie/punk in style... distorted, rough notes and chords, as well as frequent use of flat strumming and escalation..." and "Whip-smart '90s indie rock," the four-piece draws from bands like The Breeders, The Melvins, J Church and The Vaselines.
